Business Diagnostics

Paloma Consulting Limited specialises in knowledge transfer of Lean and Six Sigma techniques to organisations in numerous industries. In our experience return on investment is accelerated if prior to commencement of candidate and project selection a thorough analysis is undertaken of the opportunities for improvement. The focus may be on customer relationship management improvement, cost or defect reduction, cycle time improvement or market penetration.

It is essential that pilot projects are selected which both lend themselves to Lean and Six Sigma tool use application and are aligned with the strategic objectives of the organisation.

Purpose of Conducting a Diagnostic

Paloma Consulting Limited has extensive experience of conducting diagnostic analyses of organisations in order to identify the areas of the business which are suitable for Lean and Six Sigma waste and variation reduction projects which are aligned with the strategic objectives of the business.

Typical Deliverables

Typical deliverables of the diagnostic review include:

- a tactical plan for training, communication and evaluation of the success of process improvement knowledge transfer
- potential project areas aligned with the strategic objectives of the business
- potential scale of benefits to be obtained by the client
- potential barriers to implementation and how to overcome them
- likely internal resource requirements, structure and definition of key roles to support a successful Lean Six Sigma deployment
- timing plans

Diagnostic Review Process

The scope and process to be adopted is always tailored to specific client needs, but usually follows similar broad principles. An initial agenda for the diagnostic is developed jointly with the client to confirm timings, locations, contacts and schedules so that the time is effectively spent and the agreed deliverables are confirmed prior to commencement.
